

My Day — Every Day — in His Word!

In today's world, it seems lives are fuller and time is less available. It is so easy to claim today as "my day" instead of claiming it as the Lord's and living it as He would want it lived.

My day is each and every day because of God's grace!

So, how can I find His day in my life? Martin Luther wrote, "God's word should not only be read, but also lived and experienced in the heart." C.F.W. Walther said, "The Bible is the sun for the souls of men; it is the great fountain filled with the water of life; it is the great revelation which God has graciously given to us in the darkness of this world; it is the letter addressed to all men."

Over the years, I have attempted different types of Bible studies and other strategies, such as daily thought calendars, to keep Scripture at my fingertips. Using a variety of methods is indeed good, but what's key is remaining faithful to being in His Word. This means intentionally setting aside a time to be with the most important person in your life — your Lord, your Savior, your God.

Who are we as His Lutheran Women in Mission?

- We are in the Word! We are daily studying, meditating, and absorbing His Words for life. We begin or end "His day" in His Word. The Bible is our life's map, our pathfinder, our motivation and our comfort.
- We are of the Word! As we give ourselves to the Lord in His Word, we allow Him to change our hearts. As Luther said, "... lived and experienced in the heart." Being "of" something gives us a close tie — a bond, a commitment. That's what living each day as His is all about. We are different women because of His Word.
- We are walking daily with our Lord! Each day, I awaken knowing that He has a plan for me. He will give me guidance and direction, or if need be, correction. Our only duty in daily living is to be His witness in every situation, in every conversation, in every, in every, in every ...

The Lutheran Women's Missionary League provides many avenues to assist in making every day His day in the Word. As I look at our LWML Catalog, I find resources for personal spiritual growth, for group studies, for programs that will aid in making the study of His Word a priority in our lives.

Alma Kern penned these words on Bible study in her book, You Are Special:

"The joy of discovery! That can be our experience in daily personal Bible study. As we read and pray our way through its pages, our goal should not be to store up information. We are to seek to develop a deeper personal relationship with the Author!" She closes this page with, "Expect to be blessed! Desire to be a blessing!" [You are Special. I pray, dear sister, that "your day" is "His day!" May His Word be the sun for your soul, the fountain of life for your living, a light in the darkness, and a personal letter of love to you for eternity!
